
Poseable Figures Under Construction

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 07 October 2007
Last Updated Sunday, 07 October 2007

We've been busy at Flat City working on the first batch of poseable action figures!

These are meant to be serious upgrades to the Nervous Gary concept figure that we took along with us to trade shows.

The goal is to make them each individually unique and customizable, along with accessories.

More information as it comes, but here are some quick specs that we've settled on:

- 'Goofball scale' figures, which sort of sit somewhere near the 12" standard used for 'classic' and more conventional poseable figures. It's okay to be a bit different though, as the recent boom in designer toys has proven.
- Figures will be made of durable urethane plastic and vinyl.
- More articulation with 'Kung Fu' styled grip for arms. Legs will be a bit simple and straightforward though.
- Availability? We're not sure yet! We'll ship them when they are done. We do want to make a quality product, and beating the holiday rush is pointless if the product is garbage. We're sure everyone agrees.
- Made in the USA, just like everything else we offer.

To the right is the original Nervous Gary the Intern prototype.

To the left are some body plugs for various sized figures. This is just the beginning! Stay tuned for more!